Maybe its just a crazy thing with my nose, but I literally can't tell the difference spreading love everyone like and share helps! I first came across Guess Seductive Homme, years ago, while shopping at my local Target. Immediately I really liked the smell, and bought a bottle for myself. In fact, this sweet guess fragrance, was one of the first I ever viewed on this site back when it launched. Every so often, I'll take to this post to update the review, and expand my thoughts on that smell. This is the last incarnation. Also look: Guess the seductive Homme vs. seductive Homme Blue That guesses the seductive smell of Homme? Try it here: Guess seductive men EDT spray, 3.4 Ounce Notes include: cardamom milk, pink pepper, orchid, tangerine orange, pachuly, amber, sandalwood, and Musk. My full review of Discovery Guess Seductive Homme is warm and smooth. At the top is a tangerine orange note that gives off a juicy citrus flavor, and first cardamom milk joins it. Now this cardamm is more embedded with villain Ed Hardy rather than what's in The One by D&G. It's a light spice with a very clear and highly edible citrus flavor that's also flanked by a new pink peppery note that becomes more visible as the odecolon moves along. After about ten minutes or so, the heat becomes more enveloping as amber takes its place as the main note along with a slight muscous tally. It's such a great combination of sweet and spicy. Sweetness is unique and spicy does not overtake, just warm and attractive. None of the spice notes have that hot black pepper, pink peppers much more melted, as does pachuly and kardam milk. Seductive is just that, seductive aroma. This is not one that is feminine in its allusions, rather, fresh and masculine. Although, there is a certain floral aspect to this cologne with an orchid note. Orchid does not overdo it, but it does an excellent job in support of other flavors. The dry cargo is so sweet and the whole composition is mixed together to create a fragrance that is quite unique in the aroma of the game. There's a reason why this one caught on to be the best seller, in this very affordable price range. Finally, Guess the seductive Homme, ends its life cycle with slightly musky amber, pink peppers and fruity air. Still keeping its warm and glowing appeal. It's so clean and fresh without having a sporting vibe about it at all. Seductive Homme reserved and similar to working with the ability to stay close to The windsill, longevity and versatility of projection-wise, seductive Homme is moderate. It's actually really very good on my skin compared to some other suggestions from Guess. It's not a beast or anything, but it's much better than the smell of the skin. I get good longevity from this Guess Cologne as well. 6-8 hours is not a problem to achieve at all, and this is where the blue version of Seductive collapsed. I like it as a winter fragrance basically, although it has year-round wear and tear capabilities. I wore it in the summer and it held up decently, not great, but it wasn't a slouch either. Seductive Homme versatile in its uses. I wore it both casually and at night on dates. It works across the board. Nowadays I tend to wear it to the gym or just run errands around the city. It's the younger man's fragrance, but I still have a little bottle left and I definitely love spraying it from time to time. Does it receive an addition? Yes, I got them often with that. However, understand that it is not loud or overboard the fragrance, and so it usually will come when someone is in close proximity to you. It was always nice to wear this smell overnight at the bar back in college in the winter. This is usually when it is most noticed by women. General impressions of Guess Seductive Homme In general, I am very pleased with my experience with Guess Seductive. It is a warm, crisp, prolonged and large smell of odecolon for men, which is available at an inexpensive price. What else could you want from him? I'm glad I took a bottle of this under $20 and just like a fragrance such as Nautica Voyage, it far exceeds its price in what you get in return. It's not as well done as many of the higher design fragrances out there, but Seductive Homme provides a uniquely deliciously sweet experience, for a third of the price. It's still one of the best cheapies on the market and probably will be for quite some time. The best men's Cologne started back in 2013 as a way to share my learning experiences with different flavors as I dove head first into a hobby. Since then, I've written hundreds of reviews and other pages about perfume and odecolons. Total reviews: 13 Good that it's cheap, generic and lasts maybe half an hour. Insignificant, safe smell for everyday wear. Not strong enough for cold weather so use in warm weather. His wife said she smelled very clean this morning. First I get sweet and fresh and then dry up to some spices. Still hanging at the end of the workday, but not much projection from start to finish. Sweet, generic and forget-me-not. There's too many flavors too similar to that. Guess Zamsa, Usher, CK Euphoria, Daddy Yankee, to name a few. I prefer Daddy Yankee better because he doesn't have this synthetic suede note. Not to say Guess Seductive is a bad fragrance, more boring than anything, with the best choice out there. I gave the bottle away because I already have Daddy Yankee, which is a great fragrance. Guess seductive Homme has a very sweet first hour or so and dries up smooth and spicy. Everything is all over a solid seductive fragrance from Guess House, although it works across their other occasional headaches that lasted all of 90 minutes. Optimal energetic and sports foam for the bath. Perfect after the gym. Good, albeit boring smell. I have a hard time over making it difficult. Generally, I just think about skittles when I smell it, as others have said. That being said, bang for your buck I think it's fantastic. You can easily pick this up in places like the Marshalls for 20 bucks seamlessly. It gets good compliments, and although the projection of longevity isn't huge in any way it lasts a reasonable amount of time for what your spending is. Chances are you won't get a full day out of it, but 6 hours or so is reasonable. Honestly, my only complaint would be that I find it boring. There isn't much change, there's that pink pepper at the beginning to tingle my nose, but I always think about skittles from start to finish, so I find myself bored wearing it despite compliments sometimes. For other things like him, the one that isn't mentioned is the crush curve. Surprised no one mentioned it yet that I see. Both have a fairly similar vibration. What it's worth if you're one of those who cares about bottles, the bottle is nice, however it's very cheap done so beware. Pros: great valueCons: boringSmoch blackberries First note that hits you blackberries. On the lips you can see stains of juice. Then it warms up in a wooden aroma. Summer. Unique, Courageous. And delicious. It smells like the old spice would smell like if they had reformed it for the 21st century. Nothing to see here people... In the guest room of a rich friend's house, you managed to try several different products hidden behind a mirror. You've tried out hair products, tested lotuses, and now use a very thick shaving gel. The staff were very friendly and helpful. You are wiping your face with a guest towel that has just been washed off. You think: Whoa. It's nice. Later you'll think about it in your own home, and do nothing about it. It smells OK. It smells like a few factions I smelled before. Much better smell! Got a sample of this sweet sexual smell after I bought a Chanel Allure Homme Sport Eau Extreme. It smells like a bettor. What I expected from EAU EXTREME. I found in GUESS SEDUCTIVE HOMME. If you like ALLURE HOMME SPORT (2004) try Guessing the Seductive Homme. Page 2Total Reviews: 298 Unlike every 5th reviewer here, I must confess that I wasn't willing to dislike it nor was I willing to like it I just wanted to smell juce! Conclusion? General, bold, soft and too sweet. It's not wobble, just mediocre. However, it deserves a thumbs-down rather than neutral when one believes it was done by Chanel; same house, men Egoist and Antony gave. The end of Western civilization is nearing... evil, but no self-respecting soccerer of my acquaintance would cause this over the upper sweet and floral cure. Perhaps they sent it to a rival as a gift if they were all from poisoned apples. What is it anyway? Opium mixed with pink sugar? Amazing... Risking repeating what virtually everyone has said so far: 1. It's so common that if you held a bank blindfolded hostage, and Luca Turin and co were among them they would never be able to identify you by your smell. (At best they would tell cops that you can work at a local Sephora) 2. It's not Godawful! Just mediocre, so mercifully you don't have to clean it. Why bother anyway? If you don't find the sink within half an hour it will disappear on its own. 3. It does not offend anyone in the office, even if you bathe in it. 4. Some notes resemble Ml Veros corresponded to other Gendarmes. Not that I'm a huge fan either, but here the composition is inferior. By comparison, this one makes Baldessarini Del Mar smell like a classic masterpiece and Chrome edgy 5 star smell. 5. I disagree about what it is for college kids, or the crowd of 19-30. They are too old not to be held accountable. Perhaps forgiven with first-year high school students who received it as a Christmas present from their grandmother. Plus, it's terrific. I'm not a salad! I'm a free man! I can't give this one thumbs down, although I understand one negative reviewer who wrote that he doesn't want to smell like a stuffed Thanksgiving Turkey dressing room. Our most prolific reviewer, worthy of foetidus, put it more delicately when he noticed that he found himself respecting the faction but not fully enjoying it, so he gave him no enthusiasm thumbs up... I have to give this wonderful revived classics neutral and advise everyone to get it before it disappears again - I believe it's already begun - and if you can, get a sample vial for a test drive. No, I have a full bottle and I have to say I find the cilantro/coriander note is not to my liking. To my defense, I recall a reporter asking Luca Turin if his personal preferences affected his feedback; to which Dr. T replied that he had no impersonal preferences. And, since you die to know, cilantro refers to the entire plant, but sometimes specifically to the leaf part, while coriander refers to the seeds. Now, there's been some discussion of bad sill/projection (true) and poor longevity (wrong! it's an illusion. spray it before you go to sleep, have sweet dreams for 8+ hours, and I guarantee you'll still smell it in the morning.) Whether a bad projection/windowill is seen as restrained elegance or as a damn shame depends on being optimistic or pessy. Also, what smells like Mexican parsley in a salad is that every lover of eds should also decide whether he chooses this particular flavor. You very good to love this juce. Look at the reviews. Most do, and some go so far as to pronounce this holy grail. It's very very built, indeed. Also. How can you not cheer when the classics are ededomed? Perhaps one day Patu pour Homme, Macassar, Royal English Leather, Vintage Tabarome, Versailles pour Homme? - I live in hope. December 15, 2013 (last edited on 03 January 2014) Oh, Buddha! Where do they come up with these names? The smell in itself is like John Varvathos on steroids, possibly estrogen. Fruity and clogs with a prevailing punch, which should give elegance. However, it is necessary to concede points for monk! Have you watched any carnage spy movies lately? Fading: Our agent tries to make contact with the deadly Natasha. Could it really be her? This useful salesman by the aroma of the counter? It gives a code signal. -- Excuse me, but are you wearing A CARNAL FLOWER? She smiles and responds with a counter-signal. -- No, but have you tried the BLACK ORCHID? After that, they engage in car chases, exotic shelters, wild sex, betrayal, 10,000 rounds of ammunition, hand in hand- and at the end save the world, fall in love and scum strangely named flower froths - for the flesh of a cactus. They both sported XERVUS ROUGE at their wedding. DISAPPEAR/END. Havana poor people, or if you like, then poverty affected man Cacharel PH. Spicy fruit broth, which is ridiculously cheap. Please recommend this to the next teenager asking for an alternative to John Varvathos. 7/10? This is the best fragrance that has ever existed. I spilled some, courtesy of Scent Bar. Smelled a bit like rai ndrops. No, a drop of rain. No, make it the most strong hint of a drop of rain. I considered understanding the hype about it. You have to be naked with some baby and sweating profusely after doing a wild thing to be close enough for her to even imagine the smell. So mine giggled when, hours after applying in the S.B. I encountered a certain psychotic woman of my acquaintance who remarked, while fully clothed, how good it was to see me and how much she liked the sandal oil I was on. Sanda? Apparently, there's some comic/cosmic-flavored Rurschach-Nisha test going on here. Well, reading on all the Iso-E stuff on BN was enlightening! I suggest you look for topics... I often wondered what all the fuss was about Terre d'Hermes. There was a beloved frag around these parts that always left me shrugging my shoulders. Yes! 55% iso-Super E Be, which, as far as possible, I conclude, referring to the previous reviewer's allusion to snake oil and confessing that if I'm going to get thwarted, I'd rather spend money on a motor-oil additive engine (which skeptics assure me also does nothing) rather than on a page I can't smell. I never realized that a slicer could smell this good. Yes, I will devote it to my skin. This has great longevity, and if Japanese wooden temples are united, the better. Let me know if you have reached the sater. Quinse tried Sequoia, Palsander, Avignon, Kyoto, other forests + incense combinations from Comme des Garçons and my voice goes to Hinoki OK. Time to go to save all sentient creatures... 04th March, 2012 (last edited on 20 May 2012) I agree with reviewers that this unisex comfort incense smell that rides close to the skin. Perhaps CerSlary was best told when he described it as drunk and a fragrance for an introvert. Well, you can wear it while praying or going to Mass in the Catholic or Eastern Orthodox Church. You can also go with it on high Anglican service, although that would be the dicey thing during James First's reign. (Forget Cromwell, you'd be burned at stake) I was ready not to, since I'm a sucker, or a snob (or both) for a pure Frankincense E.O., of which there are still many good ones at a reasonable price, even if doomsayers predict that incense will soon become just as endangered and as outrageously expensive as Maysour Sandalwood, but while the discovery is not as acute like E.O.,... This smooth blend is really wonderful. Frankly, if I keep wearing this, I may have to give up all allegiance to the forces of evil- or at least dramatic forces. I wish longevity would be longer, though. After hearing Odysseum raving about it, I thought I'd give this the L'Artisan a try and I'm happy to announce that this is really Conhead's dream! Gentle polo option? Or is it a 21st century gentleman's polo? There is no monster window sill in this, which I think is a wise choice here. After all, what exquisite gentleman wants to attract attention within a radius of 20 feet? Resinous and complex, wonderful mixing of absinth (which, as I have always maintained, causes the heart to grow fonder) and spruce notes. Not least a little harsh, the problem with some coniferous offerings like the aforementioned Polo, or Yataghan, Makassar and other similar power stations. However, it is equally uber-male; quiet wau. Deconstruction meets Polo! Say what? Well, if you don't like 3, there's always 1,2, or 4 All of which contain some aspects of the original. It's probably the closest thing. But who would want to argue over something so soft and generic? Boring. At first, the discovery was a little sour and spicy. Then something else broke through that didn't have incense or sandals, but I wish it was. I remembered thinking the opposite of how much better the MPG Santal Noble was - but that was in 2005 and I heard it was reformulated into a watered-down shadow of his former self. Two hours later, I rode my own, as the plowan said, a female companion; when she watched tactfully: "You smell like f* onions! Oh my God, it's GROSS! Open the windows! - I remembered how I thought, on the contrary, how much I missed the cats. Be that as it may, I'm 100% in agreement with off-center here. Where the hell is sandalwood, anyway? Not Lorenzo's best hour. Sacré-bleu, Serge! Why you're a pro-market it. The top notes are almost passable as they don't contain the Lutens fruitcake accord brand, but it soon escalates into something afterwards. Indeed, it's quite interesting and manages to mix notes pretty well. Yes, a sublime and cheerful summer fragrance with good longevity and a fair window sill. So being in lemon citrus under the category of hot sun I'd prefer Iskander, or Vert's Choice. Let's give credit for where the credit should be. For me? 4 stars out of 5. -- Who are not too shabby. What's the point? Dulak nailed it. Yes, it's not green. The incense note is pale and outstanding. Great and unusual fresh flavor, indeed. But longevity is poor and the window sill laughs. Hence only a neutral rating. Wake me up if it ever appears in EDT. It will be worth it.16 February 2010 (last edited: February 12, 2012) I'm afraid I should think with Marcelle. The overall effect of girl-like, powdery and sweet. One day another king, and Escalibur will stand up from Lady Lake, but until then those of us who want to pipe tobacco flavors are at the epicenter of hunger. There's Tom Ford's overpriced and underrated Vanilla Tobacco. And then? Dratz! DoveMudrizer said it all. One of the few lutens that doesn't overwhelm with its ubiquitous fruit chord. Yes, there's a bit of honey at the beginning, but I was broken for it, so it didn't seem like a strong note. Do I get a pardon from the niche police?07 January 2010 (last edited: March 08, 2010) My thanks to Somerville Metro Man for answering my question for a frag that captures dry bark pipe tobacco. He didn't say what it was, but it sounded pretty interesting and I liked some sonoma suggestions before guaranteeing an attempt. Yes, it is the smell of cured tobacco leaves drying in the sun. Not really my thing, although the fraga is wonderfully well built and provides what it promises. I can't help but compare Ford's inflated Vanel tobacco to that. The TV just doesn't deliver the goods. This one does. What Taoladi told :That may be poor Erolph, but at least the sea breeze isn't required, it's a fun and inspiring smell - another black brand against you Happy!--That will make you happier than the Happy.Great good morning frag. Do you like the smell of tasteless dark vanilla tube tobacco? So am I, and it's not. The room was quite big and comfortable. There are high-quality tobacco flavors that convey exactly what they're aiming for (dry leaves are forked out at Tabac Auera, for example), but as for the smell of unsorted/bark another vanilla tobacco, I give up! In a book of Japanese incense whose name I can't remember in my lifetime, did the author mention the custom in ancient Japan of carrying a bag or bag of Kyara or Sandalwood wooden chips in the inner pocket of a kimono - or was it a neck pouch? These crazy samurai! If someone doesn't offer an alternative, that might be the only way to go for the smell. Stay in the shop of your friendly tobacco products. Dizziness and insuring aroma. Worn for a man due to its slim design. Dont ask me how he can have great longevity, windowills, opulence and still be thin. Contact master Dominique Ropion and ask him. That said, I think it works far, much better on a woman. Unless, of course, you're an androgynous rock star-- see my review of Fracas.Did I mention that I like Tuberose? Make it 8 positive reviews! Yes, it smells just like Bombay Sapphire Gin.What a great idea for summer, the most refreshing. Just hope you don't get pulled over by a police officer :) December 14, 2009 (last edited: February 09, 2010) Just as I don't like Pinot Silvester (herbal plant growing in dune/shapes) I'm with Odyssey on this one. Not only would I say it's harder, warmer and more What a Pinot. I would go further and say it's Pinot, despised by evil spirits. Still, that's just a small part of what makes this facton so good. Progression from citrus to lavender to grass to forest. Wow! No one can accuse it of being linear. I would say this is a prime example of a pyramid world perfectly from top to note.December 14, 2009 (last edited: March 08, 2010) Holy Pimenta Racemosa! So. There really is a West Indies Bay Tree, and that's where Bay Rum comes from, not storks. Added spices: Cinnamon, cloves, lime or anything serve to make it interesting - or just amazing. The room was quite big and comfortable. The room was quite big and comfortable. It feels as if a person is uncivilized, giving a bad overview of the discontinued fragrance, nor how to talk bodily about the dead, but you didn't need to scramble to washing that shit out of your hands. And I like Bay Rum.Virgin Island Water by Creed/Arfad that I will have to turn into a verdict of tropical yaz. There are much better creeds along the water theme. Salute! I forgot I used to own it. It was, for money better than a Ferrari Black. If it's a 3rd person clone, it's more wearable. Wearable.
